

Studies XXXIX. Representative Institutions in Theory and Practice, Historical Papers read at Bryn Mawr College, April 1968. To Caroline Robbins, avec une préface de T.N. BISSON. Bruxelles, 1970. In-8°, XII-218 p.

1. E.A.R. BROWN, Philip the Fair, Plena Potestas and the Aide pur Fille Marier of 1308, p. 1-27;

2. J.B. HENNEMAN, Jr., The French Estates General and Reference Back to Local Constituents, 1343-1355, p. 29-52;

Comments (Papers I and II), par G.P. CUTTINO et T.N. BISSON, p. 53-58;

3. G. GRIFFITHS, Humanists and Representative Government in the Sixteenth Century: Bodin, Marnix, and the Invitation to the Duke of Anjou to become Ruler of the Low Countries, p. 59-63;

4. C.C. WESTON, Concepts of Estates in Stuart Political Thought, p. 85-130;

5. H.H. ROWEN, Management of Estates in the Seventeenth Century: John de Witt, the States of Holland and the States General, p. 131-144;

Comments (Papers IV and V), par H.G. KOENIGSBERGER et C. ROBBINS, p. 135-154;

6. R. ZEMSKY, Power, Influence, and Status: Leadership Patterns in the Massachusetts Assembly, 1740-1755, p. 155-178;

7. J.T. MAIN, The Composition of American State Legislatures, 1780-1788, p. 179-194;

Quantification and the Study of Political Elites in Colonial America: A Comment (Papers VI and VII), par M.G. KAMMEN, p. 195-206;

8. J.E. BRINK, Publications since 1954 by American and Canadian Authors on the History of Western Representative Institutions before the French Revolution, p. 207-216;